a lower component adapted for fixation to an inferior vertebral body;
an upper component adapted for fixation to a superior vertebral body; and an element that allows movement between the lower and upper components along only two separate, independent axes.
2. (Original) The multiaxial ADR of claim 1, wherein the two axes are orthogonal to one another.
3. (Original) The multiaxial ADR of claim 1, wherein one of the axes is generally medial-lateral, and the other axis is generally anterior-posterior.
4. (Currently Amended) The multiaxial ADR of claim 1, wherein:
the element that allows movement between the lower and upper components is a cruciate-shaped axle; and the axes are generally anterior-posterior and medial-lateral.
5. (Withdrawn) The multiaxial ADR of claim 1, further including a cushioning component situated between the upper and lower components.
6. (Withdrawn) The multiaxial ADR of claim 5, wherein the cushioning component is an elastomer.
7. (Withdrawn) The multiaxial ADR of claim 5, wherein the cushioning component is a hydrogel.
